A Psychoanalytic Diary

I will ask you to keep a weekly diary as part of ENG 4015. Each week you should submit an entry (one to two double-spaced typed pages), which I will return to you with my comments, the following week. What you write can be as personal or impersonal as you wish. The following topics are merely suggestions:

- dreams you've had and attempts to interpret them
- “Freudian slips” you've come across
- impressions of the preceding class or responses to the reading
- agreements or disagreements with friends
- parent-child relationships
- attitudes toward sex, love, work, religion, the future
- problems in your life (and possible solutions to them)
- what you like or dislike about the instructor

These diaries will, I hope, stimulate you to make connections between what you learn in class and what you think and do outside of class. Although one of the aims is to encourage self-discovery, you alone will determine how introspective you wish your diaries to be. I'm particularly interested in whether you find psychoanalytic theory relevant to your own life. The diaries thus represent the “lab” part of the course, in which you become both the analyst and the patient. My primary role in reading your diaries will not be to interpret them, but to support your attempts at self-analysis.

Try to include only what is important. Do not worry about making the diaries into polished essays. You will NOT be graded, and my comments will not be concerned with spelling and grammar, though I do expect you to demonstrate good writing skills on your exams and term paper. Please NUMBER and DATE each of your entries.

Before I return the diaries to you, I will read a few of them aloud in class. The diaries will always be read anonymously, and there will be no discussion of them afterward. If you do not want me to read your diary, please indicate this on the entry. Remember that you are free to make of the diaries what you wish and they will not be graded, but they are a required part of the course.

Course Objectives

Focusing above all on The Interpretation of Dreams, this course will examine Freud's seminal writings from 1899 to 1901, a crucial period both in his personal life and in the development of psychoanalysis. The intertwining of theory and autobiography will be considered, with special reference to Freud's relationship to his sister-in-law, Minna Bernays. The primary objective is to enhance students' skills of close reading and critical thinking in order to cultivate an appreciation of Freud's genius as well as his tragic flaws. The two examinations and the required term paper will provide occasions for students to demonstrate analytic and writing skills commensurate with an upper-division English course.

Course Requirements & Evaluation Criteria

Your course grade will be based on the following criteria: midterm (25%), final exam (25%), one five-page paper (40%), and class participation (10%). I reserve the right to be more lenient if it seems warranted, but these percentages are the norm. The midterm will consist of three parts: (1) identification and commentary on five passages (25 points); (2) a short essay (25 points); (3) a long essay on a choice of topics (25 points). The two-hour final is noncumulative and will have two parts: (1) identification and commentary on five passages (25 points); (2) a long essay on a choice of topics (25 points). Part 1 on both exams is closed-book and closed-note. The essay questions are open-book and open-note. Papers must follow the guidelines of the Style Sheet. At least one week before the papers are due, you must send me an email (not an attachment) with a one-paragraph proposal for your topic and setting forth your thesis. I will respond and tell you either to go ahead or ask for further clarification before you proceed. No outside sources may be used without being specified ahead of time and receiving my permission. Early papers will be returned the following week with my comments and a grade, and may then be rewritten for a new grade. Any unapproved use of smartphones or other electronic devices during class will be subject to one warning per semester, and a second occurrence will count as an absence. Each absence over five per semester may result in a lowering of your course grade by one-half a letter. The required editions of The Interpretation of Dreams (Oxford, trans. Joyce Crick), The Psychopathology of Everyday Life (Norton, trans. Alan Tyson), and On Dreams (Norton, trans. James Strachey) are available at the UF Bookstore.

Students with Disabilities

The Disability Resource Center in the Dean of Students Office provides information and support regarding accommodations for students with disabilities in the classroom. Staff will assist any student who registers as having a disability. Official documentation is required to determine eligibility for appropriate classroom accommodations.
